NOT TO BE DISSEMINATED OUTSIDE ONI

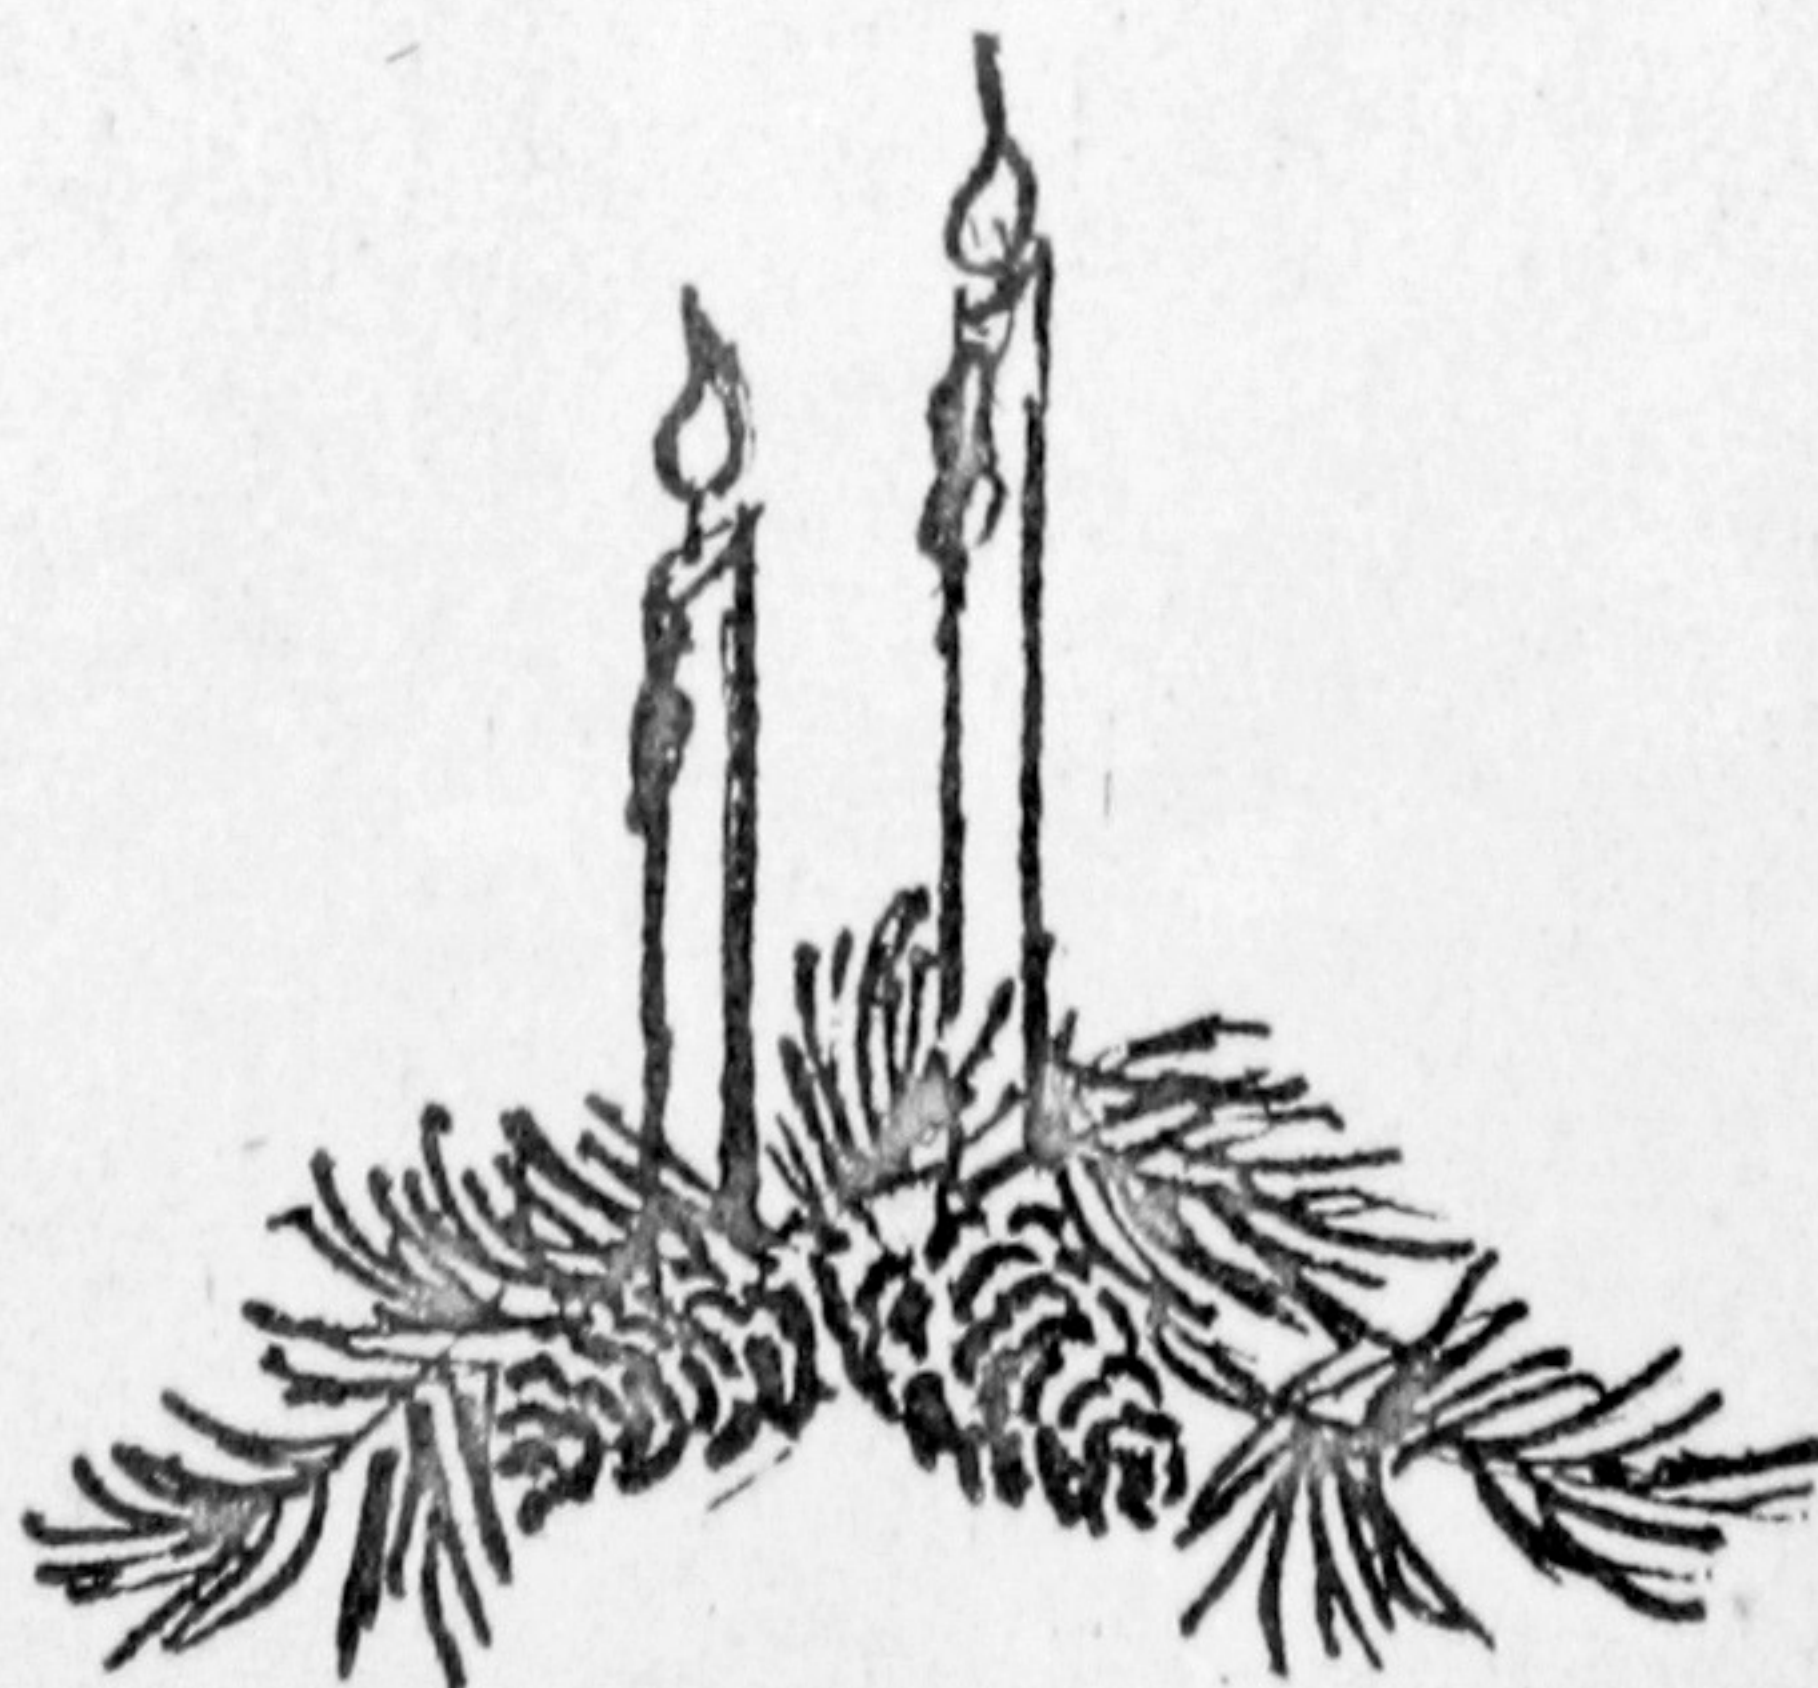

SEASON'S GREETINGS FROM DIRECTOR OF NAVAL INTELLIGENCE

Rear Admiral Rufus L. TAYLOR, USN, Director of Naval Intelligence, forwarded the following special Yuletide greeting for inclusion in this Christmas edition of your Newsletter:

"The advent of the holiday season affords each of us an opportunity for reflection on our achievements of the past and our plans for the future. This past year has been marked with some notable accomplishments by our organization, and it is with considerable gratification that I reflect on our significantly improved posture with respect to our personnel security investigation workload, and the industry, zeal, and dedication of our agent corps which has largely been responsible for this encouraging development.

"Looking ahead, I am sure that it is evident to each of you as it is to me that much remains to be done in order to continue and even accelerate our rate of progress. We are presently refining some revised organizational concepts at the direction of the Secretary of Defense, and the implementation of many of these awaits us in the New Year. The cessation of the Inter-Agency Referral Program early in 1966 will unquestionably increase our workload and test our revised organization. I urge each of you to resolve to meet these and other challenges of the New Year with renewed vitality and enthusiasm.

"I am extremely proud of the continuing loyal support and professional dedication of each member of the agent corps, and cordially extend to each of you and your families my warmest wishes for a Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year."

DEPUTY ASSISTANT SECRETARY OF DEFENSE (SECURITY POLICY)
DELIVERS COMMENCEMENT ADDRESS

Mr. Walter T. SKALLERUP, Jr., Deputy Assistant Secretary of Defense (Security Policy), visited NAVCINTSUPPCEN on 29 October to deliver the commencement address to our Agents' Basic Training Class 1B(66). Mr. SKALLERUP's provocative comments are reprinted en toto so that all field agents may benefit accordingly.

"I appreciate sincerely the invitation to be on hand for today's ceremonies, and particularly this opportunity to say a few words directly to you investigators.

"The importance of our security work to the defense effort is being given greater recognition today. I find personal satisfaction in being a part of it. I value deeply my association with Admiral Taylor, and Captain Johnson, and their illustrious predecessors. Working with them has been for me a professional experience of high order in the civilian - military relationship, and I look forward to continued, good relations.

"During the past three and a half years I have had a unique opportunity to observe the over-all DOD investigative process. I would like to share a few personal observations which I have made concerning investigative work.

"As investigators your daily work is the brick and mortar upon which the foundation of the DOD personnel security program is built; for neither the supervision, nor the evaluation process can cure a lack of accurate facts.

"You are the interface between the colossus of the DOD and the individual citizen. To the American public you are the living embodiment of the DOD security program.

"You will be delving into the personal lives of others. This calls for a high ethic, both in the manner you conduct investigations and protect the information so obtained, and also in the manner whereby you conduct your own personal lives.

"As you know, investigative activity and the protection of individual privacy are subjects of high official interest in the Legislative, the Executive, and the Judicial Branches of our Government. And in the community at large there is a continuous flow of articles in the periodicals treating these subjects; a number of books have been written like Vance Packard's, 'The Naked Society,' and Myron Brenton's, 'The Privacy Invaders.' While on the one hand, you too in a sense are 'the eyes of the Fleet,' you too must be aware that there are many eyes closely following your activities.

"Your competence in performing work may have a very influential favorable or adverse effect upon a man's career or his employment. Your perception as an investigator will be relied upon to detect potential hazards to the national security. So it is essential that your activities be conducted in a highly professional manner.

"A genuine respect for the rights of individuals and a deep commitment to your work are necessary to do it successfully. But even with such a commitment, you must in the current jargon, 'play it cool,' and develop a professional detachment from the circumstances you are investigating. Emotional involvement in a particular case may tend to distort one's vision and perception.

"Do not be lulled into believing that because you are a fact finder, and not an evaluator, you are, therefore, objective. I say no man is objective. We each are the victims of our own environment and, by the confines of our own personal experience are limited.

"But it is essential to try to be objective. By being aware of one's own preferences, dislikes, and proclivities, physical and intellectual limitations and, in short, in the light of knowing one's self, and by trying to be accurate, one can approach objectivity.

"Energy, initiative and imagination are essential to successful investigative activity, always subject, however, to required supervision. And I would urge that you try to find time for reflection and questioning. You know what I mean, the Who - What - Where - When - Why - How, series of questions.

"Also consider from time to time whether you plan your work carefully, and whether there may be more effective ways of accomplishing your work, and perhaps even at less cost. For there are only so many dollars allocated to our security operations. Consequently, over-all efficiency, in basic economic terms, goes hand in hand with good security. So keep an eye out for improving the final product and, where possible, at less cost.

"As you know, we in the security field have certain extraordinary powers which closely approximate the extraordinary task we undertake. These powers may be invoked only under appropriate circumstances. The abuse of such powers, rather than enhancing national security interests, may have the opposite effect; however, the more prudently these unusual powers are employed, the more secure and effective these powers will be when the occasion arises when they really are needed in the interest of the national security.

In brief, what I have been saying is that the investigative work you will undertake is essential to the national security; that a high degree of professionalism is required to accomplish the task; and in order to make the apparatus work, and work better, we must keep in mind the broad picture and our worthy goal: the preservation of freedom and security. In the United States of America you can't have one without the other.

"Thank you. Hearty congratulations! And good luck!"

STANDARDS OF CONDUCT

The following statements of general policy are quoted from SECNAV Instruction 5370.2C for the information of all concerned:

"All persons in the Department of the Navy, military and civilian, are enjoined to adhere strictly to the requirements of DOD Directive 5500.7 of 17 May 1963, same subject. In some instances, that Directive imposes standards which require exercise of personal judgment. It is imperative that naval personnel consider each such instance carefully and be prepared to account for the manner in which that judgment is exercised. This is particularly true in situations which involve acceptance of hospitality or favors from persons who do, or seek to do, business with the Department of the Navy.

"Persons who represent the Government in business dealings with representatives of industry have positions of trust and grave responsibility which require them to observe the highest ethical standards. Practices which may be accepted in the private business world are not necessarily acceptable for naval personnel. Acceptance of favors, gratuities, or entertainment (no matter how innocently tendered or received) from those who have or seek business dealings with the Department of the Navy may be a source of embarrassment to the Department and to the naval personnel involved, may affect the objective judgment of the recipient, and may impair public confidence in the integrity of business relations between the Department and industry."

SUPERVISING AGENT JOHN D. GRADY, 4ND, RETIRES

December 30, 1965, marks the retirement of John D. GRADY, Supervising Agent, Fourth Naval District, and terminates a long and distinguished career with the Office of Naval Intelligence. A native of New York City, "Don" was initially employed as an Agent on 29 April 1942. He was commissioned in the U. S. Navy and called to active duty in February 1943 at which time he served as an Officer Agent in DIO-3ND. He was released from active duty in 1946 only to be recalled in February 1947. For the next four and one-half years he served as the Officer in Charge of the "E" Section in DIO-3ND and was subsequently transferred to ComNavGer at Heidelberg, Germany, where he was assigned as the Counterintelligence Officer. In August 1953, "Don" returned stateside to head up the Security of Classified Information Desk (Domestic) at the Pentagon. After being again released from active duty in January 1954, he returned to the agent ranks and became the Senior Resident Agent, Newark, N. J. On 30 June 1958, "Don" assumed the position of Supervising Agent, District Intelligence Office, a position he held until his retirement.

Upon retirement, "Don" and wife Mildred (who preceeded her husband in retirement after a distinguished career with Civil Service) plan to reside at 1 Barclay Drive, Bells Lake, Blackwood, New Jersey.

Don was recently feted by many colleagues, co-workers and friends at a party in his honor in Blackwood, New Jersey.

On the occasion of Don's retirement, Rear Admiral Rufus L. TAYLOR, Director of Naval Intelligence in a letter of appreciation stated: "... You have enjoyed a long and distinguished career with the Office of Naval Intelligence, both as an officer and as a Special Agent. Many of the years spent in the latter capacity were as Supervising Agent in which position your performance has been marked with valued contributions to the professionalism of our agent corps and to the investigative accomplishments of the Office of Naval Intelligence... I hope that you and Mrs. GRADY will accept my sincere appreciation for your many years of dedicated and loyal service, and my sincere wish that you enjoy a healthful and rewarding retirement."

To Don and his wife, we wish to take this opportunity on behalf of the agents' corps, to wish you a happy and full life in your days of retirement. Bon voyage and God speed.

Well Done.

SPECIAL AGENT JOE FRANK NEELY, JR., RETIRES

On 29 October 1965, Special Agent Joe Frank NEELY, Jr., retired from the Office of Naval Intelligence after distinguished and meritorious performance during a span of almost twenty-four years of Federal service. Joe was first employed as a civilian Special Agent on 27 November 1941. He was called to active duty in the U. S. Navy on 18 June 1942, was commissioned a warrant officer, and continued to serve with Naval Intelligence in CONUS and overseas posts. He was released from active duty on 16 October 1946 and was again appointed a Special Agent on 12 November 1946, performing duties in that status ever since. During the course of this employment, Joe was assigned to the Eighth Naval District, the Sixth Naval District, the Seventeenth Naval District, and the Tenth Naval District. Joe extended his overseas tours at both Alaska and Puerto Rico and served approximately eight years in these areas. While overseas, Joe was a Senior Agent and also functioned as a Supervising Agent, directing the efforts of other agents in the major portion of criminal and subversive investigations. In 1961 he was again assigned to the Eighth Naval District where he served as Resident Agent at Lubbock, Texas. At the time of his retirement, Joe was performing his duties at the El Paso, Texas, Resident Agency. Throughout all his years of dedicated service, by his diligent and dogged pursuit of investigative leads (night and day, work day and holiday, by airplane, helicopter, warship, motorboat, automobile, on bus and on foot), by his friendly disposition, and fine spirit of good fellowship, by his many unheralded achievements, and by his unswerving loyalty to both his juniors and seniors, Joe endeared himself to all commands and to all agents everywhere. Joe, now resting from his ONI labors and leisurely enjoying ranch life in the El Paso, Texas area, has left his mark on ONI. We wish him a fond farewell and extend to him our very best wishes in all his future ventures.

WILLIAM T. POOLE, Jr. CONVALESCING

William T. POOLE, Jr., Assistant Supervising Agent, Eleventh Naval District, a recent victim of a severe coronary attack, is recovering satisfactorily according to reports from his many friends in the San Diego, California, area.

It is expected that "Bill" will spend several weeks as a patient at the Scripps Memorial Hospital, La Jolla, California, before returning to his home at 7351 Brodiaea Way in La Jolla for an extended period of convalescence.

His many friends within and without the Naval Intelligence organization wish him a complete and speedy recovery.

OTHER HONORED RETIREES

Three of our brother agents, whose accumulative time of service spans fifty-one years, have joined the role of our honored retirees during the past quarter.

Special Agent Harry L. WHITMORE was originally employed on 21 December 1946 in the Thirteenth Naval District where he remained until his retirement on 30 November 1965. From all reports, Harry will spend his newly-found leisure time in a hamlet with the provocative name of Issaquah, Washington.

In the First Naval District, Special Agent George C. EDWARDS, after more than sixteen years of highly satisfactory service, retired on 9 December 1965. George was initially employed in IND on 28 June 1946, and, except for a short break in service from 1948 to 1951, served continuously in the same District. George and Mrs. EDWARDS call Haverhill, Massachusetts, home.

Another loss via the retirement route was noted on 30 December 1965 when James J. McCORMACK turned in his credentials and badge after more than fifteen years of service. Initially employed on 30 June 1950, "Jim" spent his entire tour in the Third Naval District.

In letters of appreciation, Rear Admiral Rufus L. TAYLOR, Director of Naval Intelligence expressed his personal gratitude for the outstanding performance and valuable contributions made by these fine gentlemen to the Agents' Corps and the Office of Naval Intelligence.

NAVAL DISTRICT WASHINGTON AGENTS MAKE CITIZEN'S ARREST

Being at the right place at the right enabled two Naval District Washington Agents, Benjamin F. BLOOMINGBURG, Jr. and Carroll L. HAWKINS, to effect an apprehension of a burglary suspect in Washington, D. C. While waiting in their car for a traffic signal to change, the agents heard a burglar alarm sound in a jewelry store and observed three men running from the scene. The agents pursued and were able to apprehend one of the three culprits, who along with his two companions, were subsequently taken into custody and booked by the Washington Metropolitan Police Department. As a result of their actions, RADM Rufus L. TAYLOR, Director of Naval Intelligence, in an official personal letter of commendation stated: "This spontaneous and courageous sense of duty not only as a private citizen but also as a Special Agent of the Office of Naval Intelligence was brave and honorable... Your conduct is most commendable and in keeping with the highest tradition of the U. S. Navy. Well done."

AWARDS AND COMMENDATIONS

Special Agent Raymond C. HIGHTOWER, Fifth Naval District, recently received a Quality Step Increase award. Rear Admiral Rufus L. TAYLOR, Director of Naval Intelligence, commended Ray as follows:

"...your performance has been adjudged extremely meritorious and worthy of especial recognition in the form of a Quality Salary Increase.

"Having been employed in District Intelligence Office, Fifth Naval District since 6 July 1964, your intelligence, industry and unusual aptitude for investigative work became apparent while you were still in a probationary status, and as a consequence were assigned special investigations soon after reporting on board and have been a valuable member of the Special Investigations Squad.

"Accordingly, the via addressee hereto is hereby directed to amend your contract to provide for your services in Pay Grade 9(2) ($7733 per annum) effective upon receipt of this letter.

"Well done."

Agent Jay L. MINOR, Eleventh Naval District merited a cash grant in the amount of $200 in conjunction with an Outstanding Performance Award. Rear Admiral TAYLOR's letter of commendation advised:

"Your apprehension of Subject, while in the act of assaulting another enlisted member of the Naval service with deadly weapons on the evening of 25 October 1965 has been brought to my personal attention.

Your initiative and personal courage reflect great credit upon you and the Office of Naval Intelligence. It is particularly noteworthy that you were in an off-duty status at the time of your actions but even more remarkable, in view of your brief tenure as an Agent, that your actions demonstrated complete comprehension of your responsibilities as a Naval Intelligence Agent, and full compliance with related policy directives.

"You are highly commended for your outstanding performance of duty which was in the highest tradition of the Naval Intelligence service. As a tangible recognition of your performance, a cash award is enclosed.

"It is my hope that your performance in this instance will be but the first of many significant hallmarks in a long and successful career with the Office of Naval Intelligence."

AGENT APPLICANT RECRUITING AND PROCESSING

An increase of 60 agents over our 1 July 1965 worldwide ceiling has been authorized. Twenty of these new agents have already been recruited and their employment has been authorized in various districts. But, every effort must be exerted by all hands to recruit the most qualified personnel available to fill the remaining forty billets plus those necessary to fill vacancies created by normal attrition during the next six months. Additionally, a further increase of fifty-eight agents has been programmed for FY 1967 and approval is anticipated. These applicants will hopefully come on board commencing 1 July 1966.

Although our need is great and our recruiting and processing of these applicants must be accelerated, no deviation from published standards will be permitted. If we are to continue our momentum toward building a qualitative, professional agent corps, we must continue to attract applicants of the highest caliber with definite career motivation.

Each agent is an official ONI recruiter, and each agent should be constantly aware that in his recruiting efforts, he is playing a major role in the selection of his co-workers in the years to follow.

Regarding agent applicant investigations, note that in those few cases where an applicant is being considered who does not possess a baccalaureate degree and a partial educational waiver is contemplated, the investigative report containing the results of the education element should reflect the precise number of semester hours completed by the subject in which he attained passing grades. Should any courses attempted have been failed, this should be clearly noted as these hours cannot be credited for employment purposes.

AGENT TRAINING ACTIVITIES

Fiscal Year 1966 shapes up to be a busy one for the Agent Training Branch. Two basic training classes and one in-service seminar have already been conducted at NAVCINTSUPPCEN, and five basic training classes and another in-service seminar have been scheduled for the rest of the year. It is regretted that no technical schools could be programmed this Fiscal Year; field requirements imposed on the Technical Staff during the succeeding months thwarted any possibility of including a technical course in this year's schedule. The emphasis in training, of course, is to reduce the growing backlog of newly-hired agents who require basic training at Headquarters.

The attention of all agents is invited to ONI Notice 3870 of 9 December 1965, which advised all Districts of the convening dates of training courses during the Third and Fourth Quarters of Fiscal Year 1966 and solicited nominations in accordance with prescribed quotas.

For information purposes, the proposed schedule is reprinted here:

COURSE NO.	DATES	TITLE
2B(66)	10 Jan - 4 Feb	Basic Training Course
3B(66)	14 Feb - 11 Mar	Basic Training Course
4B(66)	14 Mar - 8 Apr	Basic Training Course
5B(66)	18 Apr - 13 May	Basic Training Course
2/IS(66)	23 May - 27 May	In-Service Seminar
6B(66)	1 Jun - 29 Jun	Basic Training Course

The agents attending Basic Course 1B(66) were required to submit a crime scene project based upon a simulated crime. The project work included a crime scene search, sketch, photographic coverage, laboratory requests, preservation of evidentiary items, fingerprinting, and an investigative report. The results were most gratifying and afforded ample justification to retain such a subject in the basic training curriculum.

Twenty-two members of the original agent training class 6B(65) which convened at NAVCINTSUPPCEN during June 1965 in an abbreviated two weeks PSI course were returned for special basic training in criminal subjects and specialized techniques. This class was augmented by Special Agent Richard C. PERKINS, DIO-1ND, who, although of considerable longevity, had never attended a basic course due to administrative circumstances, and by LTJG Brian G. JONES, presently assigned investigative duties with DIO-4ND.

During the past quarter, numerous examinations for advancement to Pay Grade 11 disseminated to qualified candidates are presently being corrected, evaluated and adjudicated. It is indeed gratifying to note the improved quality of answers submitted by the examinees. In this regard, special plaudits are due several 12ND agents whose recent examinations were all adjudged to be superior in all respects. This effort, as a whole, excelled any group of examinations corrected in several years. As a consequence, the number of failures, at one time exceeding 30%, presently amounts to less than 5%. This in itself attests to the diligence, perseverance and "plain old" hard work that the examinees are affording this most important plateau of their career development.

Conversely to those few who have failed the examination, take heart! In your next examination be explicit and select a common sense approach to your answers. Program the time allotted so that you can answer the last question with the same degree of thoroughness and conciseness as the first. Finally, have confidence in yourself and be mindful that the rate of failure in re-examination is minimal.

From time to time, articles, periodical and books of material value to the professional investigator are brought to our attention. These publications can be of inestimable educational value to our agents' corps. A recent special report published by the TIME-LIFE Corporation, entitled "THE DRUG TAKERS" presents written and pictorial evidence concerning the drug addict-drug habituate field. It is a "no holds barred" insight into the lives and problems of the ever increasing numbers of drug users within the United States. This report identifies and defines dangerous drugs and explains the medical and legal aspects involved. The Training Branch has secured a number of these magazines for classroom use. We highly recommend this magazine to the professional agent, and especially to those conducting narcotics type investigations. It can be purchased directly from the TIME-LIFE Corporation or at any newstand at $1.50 per copy.

Special Agent Ralph ROBILLARD recently displayed a Magna Brush Kit purchased from MacDonnell Associates, Box 1111, Corning, N. Y., at the cost of $12.50. This Magna Brush Kit offers an entirely new concept for the development of latent fingerprints since the method is rapid, economical, and capable of producing developed fingerprints on surfaces which heretofore have been considered impossible. Excellent developed fingerprints have been obtained from porous surfaces such as raw wood, leather, paper, and even cleansing tissue. The Magna Brush is supplied with four special powders which allow the investigator to develop latent prints on a variety of surfaces. NCISC-23, The Criminal Investigations Division, has recommended that several kits be procured for the field agents for experimentation.

PHOTOGRAPHY NOTES

A request for construction materials to be used in the completion of the physical facilities of Room 300A, Naval Counterintelligence Support Center, Arlington, Virginia, has been approved, and purchase of these materials will be made during the second quarter of Fiscal Year 1966. Room 300A is to be used for the photographic training of Special Agent personnel. During the first quarter of Fiscal Year 1966, NCISC received gratis, several thousand dollars worth of new camera equipment to be used in the training program. This equipment plus the Super Speed Graphics procured last Fiscal Year reduced by 30% the amount of money needed to outfit the training facility. Therefore, with this good beginning, it is hoped that the first investigative photography class will be graduated by the end of FY 1967.

Polaroid Corporation's new 100 series cameras (Models 100, 101, 103, 104) which accept the Polaroid Colorpacks size 3-1/4" x 4-1/4", also accept conventional film packs of the same size, e. g., Kodak TX-518. However, the conventional film packs fit loosely in the 100 series cameras unless they are inserted into the black plastic adapter remaining from expended Polaroid Colorpacks. Excellent results may be obtained with this combination. Thanks to Special Agent Ed Berlin, DIO-14ND, for bringing this idea to the attention of ONI.

SPECIAL AGENTS' ASSOCIATION BRIEF

Of interest will be the fact that our most recent dividend payment from the Navy Federal Credit Union as of 30 September 1965 amounted to $256.06. The current balance on deposit is now $14,435.36.

Of the 632 persons who have joined the Association, 565 are still active members. The remainder have died, retired, resigned or withdrawn.

New memberships have fallen off of late, only 13 having been received in September, and none in October. Local Representatives should make a decided effort to make each newly employed agent aware of the benefits of joining.

WEAPONS DATA

A problem has been encountered at the Center with .357 Magnum ammunition. In several instances, an excessive amount of lead was observed in the revolver barrels. Additional problem has been failure of the cylinder to rotate after 2 or 3 rounds of .357 Magnum ammunition had been fired. The latter problem did not arise with each weapon.

The FBI Academy Armorer determined both problems were caused by the weapons, not the ammunition. Smith & Wesson barrels are bored to very close tolerances. After several rounds of ball ammunition are fired through them, the leading problem with .357 Magnum ammunition should be eliminated. When firing .357 Magnum ammunition, the barrel should be checked after each 6 or 12 rounds and, if lead is observed, fire six rounds of .38 Special ball ammunition. If leading is excessive, stop firing and clean the weapon. For this, Hoppe's #9 bore cleaner and a brass brush is recommended.

If the cylinder locks when firing .357 Magnum ammunition, have the headspace adjusted by a competent gunsmith. The heat generated by .357 Magnum ammunition expands the cylinder and it may be rubbing against the barrel. Factory tolerances are .003" to .006". For best results, there should be a .005" space between the cylinder and barrel.

ONI Instruction 8370.2 requires that receipts be submitted to NAVCINTSUPPCEN for each .357 Magnum revolver. Only four districts have submitted receipts to date. The remaining districts should submit them as soon as possible.
